GLOBAL BROADCAST

Wells Fargo analysts say the U.S. economy is showing signs of slowing, but the Federal Reserve is likely to keep interest rates unchanged at its July meeting. Despite a 0.5% GDP contraction in Q1—largely due to a surge in imports ahead of U.S. tariffs—underlying demand remained resilient. Q2 GDP may appear stronger due to a sharp drop in imports, but real consumer spending and investments are weakening, and labour market data suggests further deceleration. The Fed remains cautious, with most members preferring to wait until later in 2025 for rate cuts. Wells Fargo expects a possible rate cut in September, followed by two more by year-end, if inflation pressures remain moderate and the labor market continues to soften.

The Bank of Korea kept its policy rate at 2.5% after a May rate cut, citing financial stability concerns. While domestic demand remains weak and trade uncertainty persists, the central bank expects fiscal stimulus to support growth from Q3. Bank of America anticipates two more rate cuts in the second half of 2025, with analysts seeing room for further easing to aid recovery.
